WONDERFUL VARIETY OF WOOD

#PARQUET

PURISTICO Ash Weiss

New on-trend wood type.

dashing ash

Ash is a type of hardwood whose light colour is fully on trend. The fascinating grain makes ash particularly dashing. When using it as a parquet floor, it is characterised by the fact it is tough and hard-wearing.

Ash is immensely versatile: a high-contrast grading with striking colour variations gives the floor an interesting and exciting look. However, light wood can also have a calm and uniform appearance.

Rooms with light-coloured floors such as ash parquet appear larger. They look more airy, cheerful and spacious. Light floor colours are so timeless that almost any furniture looks the part. They create an inviting and modern living space.

Perfect for combining.

A light-coloured floor such as ash serves as a design basis for a variety of interior styles.

Three wonderful woods.

1

Ash is a deciduous tree native to Europe and is becoming increasingly popular in interior design. The special structure and colour variation from light to dark in particular make the appearance of ash so unique. Some of its key features include its hardness and elasticity, which make it a hard-wearing floor covering.

This native softwood is considered a high-quality wood and is very versatile. Parquet floor made from larch wood has a very unique colouring from light yellow to reddish, which brings a warm and cosy atmosphere to living spaces.

COSY LARCH.

PINE.

Swiss pine belongs to the pine family and is known for its delicate fragrance, which provides a special feel-good factor. A parquet floor made from Swiss pine is rather light, the colour sometimes slightly redder than larch, for example.

Distinct natural qualities:

Vivid variation at your feet.

Parquet is nature in its purest form and the most refined flooring you can find. A floor that makes an impression. Thanks to its wonderful properties, a tilo parquet floor will become the centre point of your family life, ensure a pleasant indoor climate and simply feel good.

1. Wonderful sense of well-being.

Our parquet floors provide a wonderful barefoot feeling and are pleasantly warm for the feet. Incidentally, a wood floor can only be called parquet if the top layer, i.e. the wear layer, is at least 2.5 mm thick. tilo parquet floors exceed this, with a wear layer of 3.6 mm.

2. Live in harmony.

Luxury living with parquet: a piece of nature you'll be proud to call your own. A furnishing detail that delights and impresses.

3. Variety that is easy to maintain.

Innovative, easy-to-maintain surface: the floors, which are oiled with Innovo NATUR, really set the standard when it comes to straightforward cleaning and care.

4. Simply versatile.

A range of design options: hardly any other floor covering offers as much scope for personalisation as parquet. This is thanks to the huge selection of gradings and feels.

5. Charming lifestyle.

Something special underfoot: parquet impresses with its wonderful natural qualities – perfect for everyone with a love for unspoiled charm.

6. Design that lasts.

A floor to last for generations: thanks to the longevity of parquet, multiple generations will enjoy this wonderful natural floor.
